A News article, March 2025. A new report from an education research center studied 300 high school students. Students who studied in silence scored 78 on a reading test, while students who listened to songs with lyrics scored 70. Math scores were similar. The researchers say more studies are needed.
B Blog post by “StudyBoost Sam,” 2019. I always study with my favorite pop songs, and I remember everything twice as well. Trust me, music is the secret to good grades! Try my Focus Music app for only $4.99 a month.
C Research report, Example Education Research Center, 2024. Method: 300 high school students were divided into two groups. One group studied in silence, and the other listened to songs with lyrics. Both groups then took a reading test and a math test. Results: The average reading scores were 78 (silence) and 70 (music). The math scores were 81 and 80. Limitation: The study tested only one type of music.

A Magazine article, 2023: Ms. Han, a middle school teacher, says her students seem to remember more when they read paper books. “They often lose focus on tablets,” she said. She has not tested this.
B Research report, Example University, 2024: 200 students read the same story, half on paper and half on e-readers. On a memory test, the paper group's average score was 85, and the e-reader group's was 79. The story was short.
C News release from an e-reader company, 2024: “Our new PageLight makes reading easier than ever! Buy one now and get 20% off.”
